National Recruitment Campaign

FIA is passionate about promoting fundraising as a profession. We train fundraisers new to the sector and continue supporting their professional development throughout their career.

Fundraising is a misunderstood profession and there are many myths about it that we endeavour to correct in our communications and messaging. The culture of the sector is unique due to the power of a collective with a common goal of making the world a better place. Whether it be the environment, animals, the elderly, the disabled or the unwell, thousands of dedicated individuals choose to use their multiple skills for the purpose of organisations raising valuable funds to treat, cure, save, prevent and much more.

Never more than now has the sector faced such challenges in attracting more people to this incredibly rewarding profession. Many people come to the not-for-profit sector a little later in life, when a need to give back becomes strong and the desire to be fulfilled in a job that is more altruistic, leads them to the charitable sector. We therefore have a workforce of people we hope to convert to the profession.

That said we also want to plant the seeds of fundraising as a profession earlier in a person's life, starting at school and in the tertiary education system. Young people are the future generation of fundraisers and donors. We already see them taking strong stances on many issues which is a growing trend and one we'd like to procure.

We have investigated ways to approach the objective of educating Australia better and to guiding people to a career in fundraising.

One option was created in partnership with an award-winning agency Host Havaas who have come up with a unique proposition using a chat bot to achieve some of the objectives above. We are now at the stage of development which requires sponsorship and investment.

We invite you to contact us to see the full presentation on this unique opportunity.
